Briton Obliged To Abandon World Flight

PLANE WRECKED

Inability To Obtain Repairs Ends Venture

(Reuter's Service)

New York, August 4.—Squadron-Leader MacLaren has abandoned his world flight.

(Reuter's American Service)

New York, Aug. 4.—Squadron-Leader MacLaren has wirelessed that the abandonment of his flight was necessary, because no spares were obtainable to repair the damage to the plane, which fell near Nikolski on Saturday, just as he was completing his flight from Petropavlovsk. He added that the wings, floats and tail were all smashed, though the hull and engine were salvaged and taken on board the Canadian trawler Thiepval.

An earlier wireless despatch mentioned that Squadron Leader MacLaren had been involved in an accident near Nikolski, Kamandorski Island, but nobody was hurt, and that the airman intended to proceed to Attu.

Refugees Propose World Journey But Have No Boat Yet

If a certain local group of Russian refugees can only have presented to them a boat of some sort, they feel that their means of livelihood is assured.

The scheme originated in the mind of a former Russian navy man, according to the New Shanghai Life, a Russian newspaper. Its first essential is obtaining a small sailing boat. Once provided with a boat, the group proposes to set out on a journey around the world, the only condition being that each member of the party agree to start out without a cent in his pockets.

The refugees believe that they could provide for their maintenance by giving lectures, selling photographs of themselves and their boat, and, if possible, taking and displaying motion pictures of their journey.

However, they are still without a boat.

'Assassination Corps' Is Now Without A Victim

The Eastern Chekiang Assassination Corps finds itself today in the rather awkward position of being quite willing to undertake a strictly first-class, business-like job of assassination without a single assassinee on hand.

All of which is explained in accounts which appear in a current issue of the Min Kuo Pao, a Chinese newspaper.

As the story goes, Wu-Tsai-shing, owner of the Yung Chien Electrical Supply Company, had been honored by the corps in being selected as a target for their assassinating crew. Persuasively and politely, one Han Koong-mei, who is said to be chief of the corps and who therefore has the pleasant duty of singling out all persons marked for special favor at its hands, visited Wu-Tsai-shing to attend a little gathering of the corps at its supposed headquarters, No. 35 Hung Fah Lee, Tsing Yuen Road.

With becoming modesty, the corps commander in extending the invitation failed to mention his high position, nor did he tell the honored guest the full purpose of the proposed visit. All that Han told Wu was that a particular friend of Wu's was in distress at the address above given and had besought Han, as his messenger, to bring Wu to him. The plea moved Wu's heart, and he promptly accompanied Han.

The following day, Wu's family received an impressive letter from Han. It related among other things that the head of the Wu family had been "put in a cage," and that "it would be difficult for him to return home." "Our corps," the letter continued, "is about to set out, but we are a bit short of funds, and we have therefore asked Mr. Wu for the temporary loan of $5,000."

Whether or not Wu had consented to the loan was not made clear. However, the letter advised that some member of the Wu family engage a room at the Great Eastern Hotel under the name of Feng Tsz-yang within three days of receiving the letter, and that there the matter of the temporary loan might be gone into farther. There was the usual threat of death for Wu should the letter be ignored, and misfortune for the whole family, should anyone communicate with the police. The letter bore the signature of Han Koong-mei, chief of the Eastern Chekiang Assassination Corps.

But while Wu's family were debating as to just what should be done, Wu made good his escape, and so the Eastern Chekiang Assassination Corps is still looking for someone to assassinate.

Another case of attempted blackmail is reported in the Chinese press. Zung Lee-vung, a resident of the Chinese City, recently received two letters demanding $50,000 under penalty of death. The letters gave the name and address of the writer as Bah Vung-chong, Paoshan Road. Inquiries by Chinese detectives, however, failed to reveal any information regarding the writer at the address given, and they are inclined to believe that the letters are a hoax.

NEW FEARS FOR TIENTSIN WHEN RAIN KEEPS UP

Weather In North Described As Unprecedented By Old Residents

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Aug. 5.—Fairly heavy rain during the last two nights and unsettled showery weather today are causing increasing anxiety with regard to Tientsin, while the country districts between Peking and Tientsin are suffering severely. The oldest foreign residents of Peking describe the weather as unprecedented, there having been only a few fine days in six weeks.

(Independent News Service)

Hankow, August 2.—Rev. W. W. Highberger, of the American Presbyterian Mission at Hengchow, Hunan, has sounded an urgent appeal for funds for the relief of flood disaster in the Hengchow district, according to Rev. Highberger, continuous rains and flood have caused terrible destruction and suffering throughout Hengyang County. Loss is estimated at over ten million dollars. Desperate need of funds to relieve distress.

The Hengyang County district takes in the city of Hengchow and vicinity, and it is presumed that the overflow of the Siang River which passes through the heart of Hengyang County is responsible for this tremendous flood.

Hengchow, Hunan, is about four hundred and fifty li southwest of Changsha, and on the same river, the Siang Kiang. Judging by the gigantic proportions of the floods which has caused such destruction in that territory there will be untold misery and famine in that section of the country unless relief is provided to bring food to the people.

Peking, August 2.—T. Y. Yang, Assistant Engineer of the China International Famine Relief Commission, who was sent to Kaigan with a shipment of grain for administering relief there reported that a local international committee has been formed with the following personnel: Honorary Chairmen—H. (Reuter's Service)

The Premier declared that the United States Charge d'Affaires at Mexico City was taking up the matter with the Mexican Government. (Reuter's American Service)

Mexico City, Aug. 4.—The Federal troops and the mounted police are scouring the territory in the vicinity of Mrs. Evans ranch for the murderers. FEAR BOYCOTT ON BRITISH IN CANTON STRIKE

Laborers And Seamen May Be Induced To Join Movement

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Canton, July 31.—Since July 29 the Chinese stevedores in Canton have stopped serving British steamers. Unless a settlement of the Shameen strike comes within a day or two, it is understood that the committee in charge of the strike will agitate for an economic boycott against British firms, induce the Chinese laborers at the Taikoo wharf to declare a sympathetic strike, and influence all Chinese seamen to desert British vessels. The Committee has also issued a warning against strikers returning to their employers who might have removed their offices from Shameen to the native city.

The Canton military authorities have granted the strikers permission to use the Hoichu Theater as their headquarters. The committee appears to be well organised. It has special sections in charge of general affairs, confidential business, correspondence, statistics and press service, finance, social relations, miscellaneous affairs, picket duty, food relief, solicitation for funds, and publicity. The committee has succeeded in enlisting the help of the theatrical people and school girls to assist its financial campaign among the public for support.

MACDONALD REPORTS ON DECISIONS ON CONFERENCE

Tells Of Safeguards Taken Against Injustice

PROPOSED PACTS

Three Agreements Planned By Allies

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 4.—In the House of Commons today, outlining the decisions of the Allied Conference, Mr. MacDonald said that various safeguards had been taken to secure all parties against decisions which could be regarded as partial or unjust. All the Allied governments hoped that the effect of the agreement would be to create a new spirit of co-operation on both sides, so that some points that might have still to be left open owing to the impossibility of settling them in the present state of the public mind might become negotiable by a change of that mind. The Allied representatives hoped to confer with the German representatives tomorrow.

The Prime Minister said that it was proposed at present to execute three agreements: (1) between Germany and the Reparations Commission in regard to matters within the latter's competence; (2) between the Allies and Germany regarding matters requiring direct agreement; and (3) between the Allies themselves regulating matters of inter-Allied concern.

Mr. MacDonald concluded by paying a tribute to the spirit of loyal accomodation of the Allied premiers and other delegates and experts.

MacDonald stated that he had agreed to endorse a series of stipulations with a view to restoring the fiscal and economic unity of Germany, including restoration of the full powers of the German administration regarding the customs, commerce and railways, which was to come into full operation not later than October 15; and also a reciprocal amnesty for acts done by individuals in

GREEK RETIRED MERCHANT ENDS OWN LIFE HERE

Christos Philippidis Commits Suicide On Steps Of Mortuary

Despair over business reverses and the failure of several attempts to return to his native land of Greece are believed to have led Christos Philippidis, 66 years old and formerly a prosperous merchant at Chungking, to commit suicide early yesterday.

Philippidis' body, with a bullet wound in the head, was found lying on the steps of the Municipal Mortuary at Pearson and the Honkew station who happened to be passing by at 5 o'clock yesterday morning. Near the body was a Mauser pistol with four cartridges in the magazine.

In one of the pockets of his white suit was a letter written in French which read:

"To those who offer obstacles to my departure to my country, I offer my corpse—Panopi."

Police from the Hongkew station, who were called to the spot where the body lay by the fireman who originally discovered it, found that life had been extinct from about two hours. The body, after being viewed by Dr. McInistry was removed to the mortuary.

An application for an inquest was heard at the Mixed Court later in the day by Assessor Bucknall. The statement of a friend of the deceased tended to show that his mind was unbalanced by a succession of business reverses and his fervent desire to return to Greece. Deceased had been a prosperous merchant in Chungking. Later he started a cigarette factory here, but this proved a failure, and still later he lost $12,000 in the purchase of a motor-boat for trading purposes.

For some days past he had been telling friends here that he intended to go on a long journey, and always, when questioned, spoke vaguely of his destination and said he would never return.

Assessor Bucknell held that under the circumstances no inquest would be necessary, the case plainly being one of suicide. A nephew of the deceased resides in Chungking, and he has been notified of his uncle's death. Funeral services are being arranged by members of the local Greek community.

In recent months deceased had resided at 779 East Yalu Road.

The defendants were arrested early Sunday morning at 185 Pingliang Road on application of the French Police, who requested assistance to take them into custody in connection with cases of murder and attempted murder. It is understood that the principal object of the plan is to eliminate five divisions of the army, to complete the projected air-force and to secure a full supply of up-to-date arms of all descriptions, and that those which are to be abolished are the 13th, 14th, 15th, 17th, and 18th divisions.

MacDonald Reports On Decision On Ruhr Conference

consequence of the events which had taken place since November 1, 1923. He added that disputed interpretations of the experts' report and the Conference agreement would be referred to the Committee of Jurists. The Government had agreed that in the event of taking sanctions they must act as trustees for all interests created by the experts' report and, especially, not damage the security of the loan.

Questioned regarding the action the governments might take with reference to sanctions in the event of a declaration of default, Mr. MacDonald said that matters remained as left in the Treaty of Versailles; namely, when the governments failed to agree it was possible for them to pursue their own policy. It was obviously very unsatisfactory (Opposition cheers) but the whole situation would be eased if they could get the state of unanimity necessary before a default could be declared.

Members might rest assured that the question of sanctions was not likely to arise in a hurry. The loan would not be floated under the auspices of the governments or the responsibility of the governments, and the bankers must consult German representatives in regard to security before they could definitely say whether they would float it.

Replying to Mr. Lloyd George Mr. MacDonald emphatically adhered to the view of the late government that France's separate action was not sanctioned by the Treaty of Versailles. He declared that the Spa Agreement with reference to the proportion of reparations deliveries of the various Allies had not been disturbed.

(French Wireless through Reuter)

London, Aug. 4.—The German delegates expect to receive on Tuesday morning the text of the reports of the three committees. The Conference will sit permanently in order to expedite a solution.

Only one expert will be allowed to present each case, but others may be in attendance.

We wish to see the report carried through as soon as possible and intend contributing our part towards its loyal fulfilment. We do not doubt that we shall find the same spirit prevailing in London. If that is the case then it may safely be assumed that we will speedily come to an agreement."

Ricsha Coolies Ask Council Protection Against Employers

In view of the decision of the Shanghai Municipal Council to limit the number of public ricshas in the Settlement to 10,000, ricsha coolies have been holding a series of meetings to discuss means of safeguarding their livelihood or obtaining some other means of earning a living, according to the Chinese press.

The meetings have elected representatives who have been instructed to draw up a petition to the Municipal Council asking that regulations be made to insure the coolies against any in practices on the part of the ricsha owners.

In a petition to the Kiang-Hwai Provincial Association, the coolies pointed out that at the present time they are forced to pay for the hire of their ricshas when the ricshas are undergoing repairs, when the licenses have been seized and they are consequently unable to operate, and on stormy days when there is little opportunity for them to earn anything. They ask that the condition be corrected.

PLANS FORMED FOR ORGANISATION TO FIGHT NARCOTICS

Formal Meeting Will Be Held On Aug. 24 At 3 O'clock

The China National Anti-Narcotic Association will be formerly inaugurated on August 24 at 3 p.m. according to the decision of representatives of various local organisations at a meeting held at the Chinese General Chamber of Commerce yesterday. The purpose of the organisation is to rid the nation of the curse of opium and other narcotic drugs which had been on the increase recently.

Another meeting of the representatives will be held on the 21st when nominations for officers of the association will be made. The meeting yesterday was presided over by Dr. P. W. Kuo, president of the National Southeastern University. The organisation of the new body, according to the craft constitution calls for the appointment of six standing committees: On General Affairs, On Publication, On Investigation, On Publicity, On Membership and On Finance.

Eighteen Months In Jail For Men On Assault Charge

Two men charged with assault, one being also charged with highway robbery, appeared in the Mixed Court yesterday before Mr. Bucknell, American Assessor, and Magistrate Zau. The first charge was one of setting upon another man with a chopper and causing him injuries serious enough to necessitate his confinement to a hospital for a few weeks.

The complainant on this charge testified in Court yesterday that the two defendants were present at the time he was injured, but they were not the ones who used the chopper on him. Another witness, however, thought that the first accused was the man who had used the weapon. The fact that this man had had five previous convictions did not help him in the eyes of the Court.

With regard to the charge of highway robbery against the second defendant, he was accused of knocking a man down in an alleyway off Purdon Road and stealing a gold bangle.

The accused themselves were not questioned. Both were found guilty by the Court, and sentenced to eighteen months each, with expulsion from the Settlement.

"Thought It Was Opium," Says Wong; One Year In Jail

All is not gold that glitters, and all is not opium that is carried in suspicious-looking parcels, is the truth upon which Wong Ah-kung will have an opportunity to reflect in retirement from the world for the coming year. Wong was arraigned before Mr. Jacobs, American Assessor, and Magistrate Sung in the Mixed Court yesterday, charged with larceny. Wong and some acquaintances, it appears, stopped one Phe Wen-sung on Hupeh Road Sunday evening, accused him of violating public law and morals by carrying opium on his person, grabbed a parcel he was carrying and eloped with it. Phe promptly let out a shriek which was distinctly heard by the Chinese constable on duty about a quarter-mile away, and the latter, approaching on the double-quick, saw Wong running with the parcel and nabbed him.

In Court yesterday, Wong said he had heard that the complainant was in possession of opium, and had gone up to have a look at the stuff and was arrested. Wong, however, has had six previous convictions, and in addition to the larceny charge—the parcel in question contained clothing—was charged with returning from expulsion. He added a seventh conviction to his speckled record yesterday, being sentenced to a year's imprisonment and re-expulsion.

Prefecture Heads Of Japan Convene

(Eastern News Agency)

Tokio, August 5.—The conference of prefectural governors throughout the country was held today at the official residence of Premier Kato. In the course of the meeting, the Premier laid stress on strict enforcement of government discipline, readjustment and curtailment of administrative and financial affairs in local prefectures as well as on elevation of the national spirit and urged that every effort be made to encourage the people as a whole to devote themselves towards the development of real power of the country.

Chinese Charged With Attempted Murder Remanded

Two men charged with the attempted murder of a Chinese police constable appeared in the Mixed Court yesterday afternoon before Mr. Whitamore, British Assessor, and Magistrate Oen. The accused men are Eu Ts-yi, 23 years of age, and Tsang Ah-zi, 34 years old. Mr. Moss is conducting the defense of the first accused.

The alleged shooting took place more than a year ago, on the morning of June 8, 1923, at Point and Yuen Fong Roads, in the Harbin Road district. A Chinese police constable, an eyewitness of the affair, was put on the stand yesterday and testified to having seen both the accused fire at C. P. C. E1195, who was wounded in the cheek. The injured constable himself was then put on the stand.

Three rickshas, it appears from the evidence, passed the corner where the incident occurred. Chinese police constable E1195, who was just going off duty, was in the telephone box calling up the station when he saw two men, who, it seems had got out of the rickshas, running, being pursued by another constable. He at once ran out of the telephone box and attempted to seize one of them. The man turned and fired point-blank at him, the bullet going through his right jaw. Only one shot, he stated, was fired.

The case rests largely on the question of identification. Both constables yesterday identified the accused, but one stated that each man had fired two shots and the other—the wounded man—declared that only one shot was fired.

The case was continued for a further hearing.

Murder Charge Is Lodged Against Old Chinese Woman Here

An elderly Chinese woman charged with murder appeared in the Mixed Court yesterday before Mr. Jacobs, American Assessor, and Magistrate Sung. The defendant, Wong An-sz, is accused of the murder of Dzau Ching in the Gordon Road district on July 9.

D.-S. Andrews testified in Court to the defendant having gone there last Saturday, having been arrested when leaving. He asked the Court to remand the defendant for the Italian Assessor, as her son was already in custody and had been charged before Mr. Ramondino. Mr. Addis, appearing for the defense, asked the Court to grant bail, mentioned that the woman had come to the courtroom as a witness last Saturday, voluntarily, and that he did not think she would run away.

The Court remanded the woman in custody until Saturday, when the case will be heard before the Italian Assessor.

Sikh Hotel-Keepers Are Defendants In British Court Case

In the British Court yesterday, before Judge Peter Grain, the case was begun of Win Tai and Co. vs. Jujjan Singh, Sucha Singh, and Bishan Singh. The defendants were the promoters of a hotel which failed, and the landlords of the building, Messrs. Win Tai and Co., are now endeavoring to secure the payment of some of the money owed them by the Indians.

All three defendants gave evidence in Court yesterday. The prosecution endeavored to establish their interest in a certain printing establishment, against which judgment might be obtained for the debt involved.

Sikh Money-Lender To Foreign Woman Withdraws Action

A case showing the methods of some of the Indian money-lenders here came up in the British Court yesterday before Judge Peter Grain. The defendant was a woman of British nationality and the complainant an Indian money-lender, Pakhar Singh, who claimed money alleged to be due him from the defendant.

The defendant, put on the stand, told the details of the transaction. She had borrowed $100 from the man a year ago, signing for $180, as is usual in such transactions, the money to be paid him in ten monthly instalments of $18 each. She paid regularly up to last May, when she was short of money and had to postpone payment of the instalment. After a short time the money-lender got out a summons for her for payment of the small balance remaining, and she was obliged to promise him more money in order to induce him to withdraw the case. He charged her $13.50 for the "cost of the summons" and another $20 for his consent to withdraw the case. She agreed to pay if he would allow her a little time, and he consented to this if she would pay him an additional $10 for his "kindness." As for the original debt she had incurred, she owed him nothing whatever.

"Is it true," asked the Judge, turning to the money-lender, "that the lady has paid you all the money she borrowed from you, and that what you are claiming now is extra, including $20 as a bribe to you for withdrawing the summons?"

The Indian looked uncomfortable. "If the lady will swear before God," he said, "that she owes me no money, I will withdraw my claim."

"I do swear before God," the woman responded passionately. "I have paid him everything I owe him."

"You hear that?" said the Judge to the money-lender. "Do I understand you are prepared to withdraw the case?" The Indian, after a moment, indicated assent.

"Case dismissed," said the Court.

Tomorrow Night's Card: Keenan Matched With Rufe Canion For Thursday Week

By "Vic"

Kid Gabo, the flyweight champion of China, will defend his title tomorrow night at the Carlton, when he will step into the magic ring with Young Domingo, the classy little rope-skipper.

In their previous meeting, followers of fistiania will recollect how Domingo was sent to the land of oblivion in the last minute of the final round. It was a hard-fought contest, with the issue in doubt till the kayo when Gabo caught his opponent in a corner and subjected him to a severe pummelling under which he fell for the fatal count. If that scrap can be taken as a criterion, then Thursday night's fight should hold the fans spell-bound with excitement from the very start.

Battling Nelky surprised the local boxing world when he knocked out one Battling Kyko a month back, and whether he will be able to spring another remains to be seen. Here again the Russian will have the advantage in weight, but whether this will help him any against the Moro is hard to say, for the latter is another of those who delight in punishment. This bout will be a semi-windup of ten rounds.

After beating Flores last week, Terrible Pete has been matched with Yokoyama—the plucky little Japanese who stood up to Syd Keenan for five rounds before he was knocked for a row of pins. The Jap has improved a lot and should take his corner with the betting in his favor.

By the way, I understand, Syd Keenan has been matched with Rufe Canion for a twelve-round mill Thursday week. Readers will remember this fight was first suggested in last Sunday's notes, and from the way the boys are shaping in training it should prove a pippin of a scrap. Both lads pack a very hard punch, and he will be bold who dares predict the winner before they enter the squared ring. Both will toe the bantamweight mark, namely, 118, and the winner will, in all probability, be given a bout with Billy Tingle, the champion.

The curtain-raiser will see Frisco Peralto matched with Panama Siki. Peralto has the heavier punch and should win via the kayo route if he can get his eye to judge correctly. Siki, however, is no raw one. He is light on his feet and should manage to keep away from the haymaker.

The promoters have asked me to state that the fights will be staged on the Roof Garden.

New London-Bermuda Race

Yacht Gnome Has Easy Win In Bi-Weekly Race

The Shanghai Yacht Club held their bi-weekly harbor race yesterday afternoon when conditions were very favorable as a good strong northeast wind was blowing with a flood tide. Nine boats raced over a course of four miles in the harbor, starting from the Peking Road jetty and going up around the Japanese Naval buoy, then back to the Peking Road jetty. After covering this course twice the boats finished in front of the Club houseboat "Foam."

The Gnome a very fast boat in the Byrne class jumped off and took a good lead which she held all during the race and finally won about a half mile ahead of the other contestants who were all quite well bunched. The Viking and the Phantom finished in second place at a dead heat but the Viking was given the second place because of her 1 minute handicap. The yachts were all in the positions which they started off with and went over the course with very little change. The Haikuan, threatened to pass the Viking several times but on each attempt the latter held on to her third place as the Phantom had second position cinched for nearly all the way.

On rounding the Japanese Naval Buoy the first trip around the Gnome took a nice lead and kept on increasing it. The Phantom came second and the Viking took third place, but after clearing the buoy the first two yachts increased their lead over the Viking and the following boats took to a mid stream course. This course helped the Gnome but the Phantom lost although she kept a good lead. While the other yachts were scrapping for second and third places the Gnome kept up her steady increase and upon rounding the Naval buoy the second time she was more than half a mile in the lead. When the rest of the boats reached the finish line she was anchored on the Pootung shore and put to rest for the night.

When the Phantom rounded the Naval buoy she again took a midstream course while the Viking was slowly creeping up by beating the Pootung shore and when the two boats reached the markboat the Viking swung round and came alongside her rival Phantom. The two boats were a dead heat for the second position but after looking at the time it was discovered that the Viking had a one minute handicap which gave it the right to second place.

The Viking certainly ran a good race, for she found herself in bad places many times but always squeezed out. Although the Viking and Phantom ran a close second the Haikuan was right behind them all the way after their second trip past the buoy.

RACE SUMMARIES:

Series—3. Race—3. Tide—Flood. Wind—Northeast. Force of Wind—4. Course—Upriver from Peking road jetty around the Japanese Naval buoy to port-side and back to Peking Road jetty, twice around this course. Starting time—5:45. Distance—4 miles.

GREAT COMEDY BILL OFFERED AT NEW CINEMA

Alhambra Will Show Jackie Coogan And Buster Keaton Tonight

Shanghai's newest open-air theater with its 1500 comfortable wicker chairs, will screen tonight, tomorrow, Friday and Saturday nights two big feature comedy productions that should test the capacity of the big open-air-showplace. Jackie Coogan in "Daddy" and Buster Keaton in "The Boat" will be the feature attractions. "Daddy" is the latest and best of the Jackie Coogan photoplays and "The Boat" is considered to be the funniest of Buster Keaton comedies.

"Daddy" is a most charming story, chock full of comedy and pathos. The story was written by the parents of this inimitable star and in the film Jackie is ably directed by Mason Hopper and supported by such well known screen stars as Cesare Gravini, Arthur Karewe, Josephine Sedgewick, Bert Woodruff, Anne Townsend, William Lewis and George Kuwa. Another important member of the cast is "Mildred" who is just a plain pig, but she is the source of much laughter, as she follows Jackie about in the hope that he will milk the cows and feed her through a nursing bottle. Jackie's adventures on the farm constitutes the majority of the picture's comedy situations. In "Daddy" Jackie appears at his best and will no doubt win new laurels in the hearts of movie patrons.

"The Boat" is Keaton's funniest comedy and it is just one continuous roar of laughter from beginning to end.

Internationalism Even In League Personnel

Many Unions Of Different Nationalities In Secretariat Raises Question Of A New "Geneva Type"

Geneva.—Probably only those who have visited the secretarial offices at Geneva of the League of Nations and the International Labor Office have any conception of the unique nature of the staffs at work in these two buildings. The two organisations employ together between 600 and 700 persons drawn from all parts of the world and representing between 30 and 40 nationalities. Nowhere else in the world can one find working together people of so many different races all on a footing of equality.

Every branch of the work undertaken has its distinct section, in which the personnel is as varied as possible and chosen with careful eye to the nature of the work—especially in cases where a national bias might have play or cause suspicion—the work is closely coordinated and forms a complete machine.

TWO OFFICAL TONGUES

The League has two official languages—English and French. An effort two years ago, to make Spanish an official language was not successful. The representative of any member state has a right in any gathering of the League to speak in his own tongue provided he assures himself an interpreter in English or French.

Thus, while the members of the secretarial staffs represent many races and many tongues they have always one thing in common—a thorough knowledge of one or both of the official languages. This has had an effect upon the selection, as it has called for a kind of internationalism even in individuals. A certain number have, of course, been drawn from the various diplomatic services, in which a knowledge of French, at all events, is essential, and in which some degree of cosmopolitanism is necessary. Others have family ties with either England or France. They come, perhaps of mixed parentage, being French or English on one side, or through international association they have contracted mixed marriages.

A brief inquiry made recently by the writer showed that there are here many international matrimonial alliances.

INTERNATIONAL UNIONS

A quite casual jotting down of instances of mixed marriages resulted in the following:

League Secretariat: Three Englishmen with French wives; other Englishmen with Belgian, Hungarian, Polish, Rumanian and Swiss wives; an Italian, a Serb and two Spaniards married to English wives; American married to Irishwoman; a Swiss, a Japanese and a Frenchman married to American women; a Dane married to a Frenchwoman, a Czech married to an Irishwoman; a Dutchman to a Frenchwoman.

International Labor Office: French, French Swiss, German Swiss, Canadian and Rumanian all married to Englishwomen; an Englishman married to a Swiss, Frenchman to Irishwoman, Finn to Frenchwoman, Swiss to Russian, and Belgian and Swiss to Polish women.

In the cases of English and French alliances probably both languages are spoken, but in the other cases it sometimes happens that neither knows the other's language, and French or English is commonly used. In one case, of an Italian and Englishwoman, the medium of communication is French, while in the case of an Anglo-Finn married to a Polish wife the home language is Russian.

Suffice it to say that Geneva is becoming a center of genuine internationalism in culture, thought and race, and if the edifice continues to stand and to widen its foundations the city may become in course of time the home of a new international type with but slender allegiance to any particular country.

"Always Playing Around With My Wife," Says Pen

Pen Kwo-ming is very sensitive about other gentlemen getting too familiar with the wife of his bosom, but when they respond to his objections by pummeling him about the face and body, he feels that a stop must be put to the thing.

Tsang Foh-ching is the would-be breaker-up of the Pen household, and appeared in the Mixed Court yesterday on a charge of assault. Pen declared that Tsang was always playing about with his (Pen's) wife. Whenever Tsang passed the house, it appears, which happened most frequently when Mr. Pen was absent, he (Tsang) wanted to play about with Mrs. Pen. When Pen finally told Tsang he was to discontinue his attentions, the latter struck him, according to the charge, on the face and body with his clenched fist causing grevious bodily harm.

Tsang, on the other hand, accused Pen of hitting him first. He was found guilty, however, and sentenced to two day's imprisonment or $2 fine.

ADMISSION OF STUDENTS TO U. S. EXPLAINED

Message To Consulate Gives Details Of New Rulings

Telegraphic instructions concerning the new rulings governing Chinese students travelling to the United States have just been received by the American Consulate-General here and were made public yesterday by United States Consul-General Edwin S. Cunningham.

The message received at the consulate-general from the United States Department of State states in effect as follows:

"The new immigration act is explicit in requiring approval by the Secretary of Labor of educational institutions in the United States to be attended by Chinese students.

"Such approvals must be obtained in advance in each case until the list of approved institutions can be prepared and forwarded.

"Owing to the necessity of consulting the institutions, an approved list is not yet prepared.

"In the meantime, endeavors should be made to prevent whenever possible, the departure of Chinese students for whom prior approval of institutions has not been obtained."

The Department's telegram was received in response to several urgent telegrams from the consulate-general here, requesting information as to the requirements to enable Chinese students to sail for the United States.

Chang Tso-lin Is Still In Doubt On Soviet Settlement

(Reuter's Service)

Harbin, July 30.—Marshal Chang Tso-lin's final views on the Chinese Eastern Railway question are not yet known and it is doubtful whether he has definitely decided what attitude he will ultimately adopt. The Russo-Chinese Conference referred to in the press as having been in progress lately in Mukden in reality can only be regarded as partially bearing the character of a conference, as it is merely the clearing up of local points of view in preparation for the future conference in Peking. As regards Marshal Chang Tso-lin's attitude towards Moscow, he has his own views on quite a number of questions and will probably stick to them, but it is said that he has no objection to putting into effect any results obtained from the Peking-Moscow negotiations which are not injurious to the interests of the Three Eastern Provinces.

Guard On Steamer Routs Pirate Band

(Reuter's Service)

Harbin, July 30.—The river steamer Kwang Chang, belonging to the Bank of Tsitsihar, arrived yesterday in Harbin from the upper reaches of the Sungari. It appears that on her outward trip, when 90 versts from Harbin, a band of about 40 hunghutze appeared on the bank of the river and poured volleys of bullets into the steamer. The guard on the steamer replied with their rifles and a small gun and caused the bandits to cease fire. There were no casualties on the steamer. On her return trip the vessel met a band of hunghutze at the same spot, but, evidently recognising the steamer as the one that had so effectually routed them before, the robbers did not attack her.

Eldorado Ordered Shifted By Gen. Ho

According to the Chinese Press, General Ho Feng-lin, defense commissioner for Shanghai and Sungkiang, has ordered the Russian refugee ship Eldorado towed to a berth in the South Whangpoo off Kao Chang Miao where it will be kept under strict surveillance. General Ho gave orders to the Chinese naval officials and police to this effect after the Eldorado had fled to Tsungming, where, he feared, members of the crew would attempt to dismantle and sell the guns.

U.S. CORPORATION IS PLANNED FOR FOREIGN LOANS

Proposed Body To Advance Funds To Develop Industries Abroad

New York, July 12.—What, it is asserted, will be the initial step in a broad-scale plan for the creation of a foreign loan market in this country, and one which, it is said, has the support of half-dozen or more leading American manufacturers in basic industries, will be laid before the investment public soon in the form of a large debenture corporation whose purpose it will be to lend to nations at present unable to finance to the extent desired their own industries and developments.

The plan is being worked out here and, according to Franklin Remington, Chairman of the Board of the Foundation Company, the details may be expected before long. Mr. Remington declined to divulge the names of the manufacturers who are said to be interested in forming this corporation, explaining that these would be made public when the plan was in final shape for announcement. He said, however, that they would include "the leading American manufacturers of electrical supplies and railway equipment."

Mr. Remington made an address last month at Boston before the National Foreign Trade Council, of which James A. Farrell, President of the United States Steel Corporation, is the head, in which he proposed that such a corporation be formed by manufacturers. Yesterday he said:

"Our foreign trade needs more help from the American banker, but most of all it needs more help from the American investor. Here you have to make very attractive inducements to get the American investor into foreign securities. Our investors at the present time do not understand foreign securities. And our American bankers will not buy them to offer here until they are certain they can be passed on to the investment public.

"An American Debenture Corporation is being planned and along with it is suggested that there be organised a corporation of foreign bondholders, would carry on an educational campaign to acquaint the American public with foreign securities. It will go still further and be the means of supplying analytical information as to the merits of a proposed foreign loan to be sold here. In a sence this association or corporation will be a protective committee for the safeguarding of the American investor's investment, as the British corporation of bondholders does. The standing of this association would be very high, with full powers to blacklist a foreign security which failed to measure up to the requirements. The corporation of foreign bondholders would make records of existing outstanding bonds for purposes of comparison and analysis. It would use its good offices in cases where loans were in default or where it might develop that the loans might in future go by default."

The proceeds derived by foreign countries from loans placed in the United States would go for the purchase of American manufactured goods and American materials, Mr. Remington said. Detailed examination into the history of a large number of foreign loans made by Great Britain divulges few instances, according to Mr. Remington, in which money spent for manufactured articles was not spent on British products.

He explained that he was not speaking of loans made or to be made from refunding or other economic reasons, or for the purpose of helping those nations get on their feet who have been prostrated during the war. He meant, he said, loans for internal developments, for the building of railways, power plants, harbor improvements, sanitation and irrigation work, etc. The benefit to foreign trade, Mr. Remington asserted, and through that to industry in general, was an advantage which any forward looking nation must recognise.

The proposed debenture corporation is to be organised in co-operation with American bankers. Half of the capital would be taken, Mr. Remington has suggested, by the group of manufacturers. If the manufacturers comprising such a group are well known to the public for their financial strength and integrity, it should not be difficult, he said, to obtain from the investing public the other half of the capital required. Responsibility for the management of the corporation would rest with the manufacturers.

With the capital so acquired, the management would make its first purchase of foreign bonds issued solely for the purpose of purchasing American-made products, such as locomotives, rails, electrical machinery, cars, &c. These foreign bonds would be placed in trust and there would be issued against them as security the debentures or obligations of the debenture corporation.

MILLION AND HALF MARK REACHED BY PATENT GRANTS

Right Given To Connecticut Man For Marine Icebreaker

Washington, July 1.—Announcement has just been made by the Secretary of the Interior that the one and one-half millionth patent issued by the Government was granted today. Simon Lake of Connecticut received this patent for a new type of submersible vessel designed to navigate under ice. The invention, according to a statement made at the Interior Department consists of a superstructure for a cargo-carrying vessel by which its navigator on encountering ice, may submerge and run beneath the ice and then rise to the surface, breaking up the ice and opening a path for continued surface navigation.

Secretary Work stated that the million and a half patents granted did not include those issued before the present patent office came into existence. Formerly patents were issued under the direct authority of the President, and between 1790 and 1836 9,967 patents were so issued.

The first patent granted after the creation of the Patent Office was in 1836. From that year to 1893 500,000 were issued. The one million mark was reached in 1911. In fifty-seven years the first 500,000 patents were issued; in eighteen years the second 500,000, and in thirteen years the last 500,000.

"Beginning about 1836, rail and steamship transportation started their important development, in more telling fashion, and the era typified by the grant of the first 1,000,000 United States patents from 1836 to 1893 saw more changes that profoundly affected civilisation, our mode of living, our health and progress, than any 1,000 years previously," said Secretary Work.

"During these fifty-seven years an evolution of profound depth, of farreaching effect, was produced. The steam engine was perfected, and its application to machinery and transportation made effective and universal; the whole art of electrical generation of power, its transmission and utilisation was invented and applied; electrical lighting, heating and communication were established; industrial chemistry became a force and a standard of industrial progress; labor-saving machinery impressed itself for the first time generally as a universal factor in our industrial life, and the internal combustion engine, with all its tremendously important implications, was developed and applied.

"The second period, from 1893 to 1911, although being considerably shorter, still produced such far-reaching inventions as the automobile, the airplane and wireless communication.

"The era covering the last thirteen years is notable mostly for generally intensive pursuit of improvements, particularly in the multiplying of the effectiveness of the labor-saving device, leading to automatic machinery.

"These 1,500,000 patents form a library of untold value. No advances in industrial and scientific arts have been made that are not recorded in the specifications of patents. Copies of all these patents are also on file in the Patent Office and from the permanent record for search purposes for use of the examining corps to determine novelty of applications for patent. Copies are also kept in stock for the purpose of sale, so that they may be available to the public, practically at cost. Such copies number about 50,000,000 and occupy about twenty linear miles of single shelving in the Patent Office, over 200,000 copies of such patents being sold each month. More than 50,000 patents and trade marks are being issued each year."

Simon Lake has received many other patents from the United States Government. He is a pioneer in practical submarine boat work and has patents for internal-combustion engines and underwater dredging.

Cotton Traders Puzzle Over Government Report

(Reuter's American Service)

New York, July 3.—The question uppermost in the minds of cotton traders at the close of the present week is what will be the outcome of a government crop report that is much beyond expectations, more particularly as to its effect on the cotton goods trade. A broker in the local cloth market remarked this week that business in his line was at the lowest ebb in forty years, and it seemed to be the consensus of opinion, at least in the raw cotton market, that the suggestion of lower prices which the government report gave would cause a further contraction of business in the goods end of the trade.

The speculative selling which naturally followed the report on Wednesday was intensified by a belief, following the bearish weekly crop and weather review of the government, that conditions at the present writing are several points better than they were at the time the bureau reports were compiled on June 25. Few private estimates on condition were close to the government figure of 71.2. As a whole, the trade expected a figure around 70 or possibly a little under.

With a promise of around 12 million bales for the crop it is expected that speculative selling will be more aggressive in the near future, especially if weather prospects remain as favorable as they have been the past week. With the exception of rather too much rain in the South Atlantic states, and a need of moisture in North and Central Texas, the cotton crop has enjoyed very favorable conditions recently. Even in the districts mentioned, the damage has been more feared than real, and a twelve million bale crop will require some revisions of price ideas among all branches of the trade.

WELCOMED BY TRADE

In many respects the prospect for a more liberal yield of cotton this year would be a very welcome one among the trade at large. Lower prices would stimulate business all around. Commission houses have found it difficult to interest customers in prices at the 25-cent level for new crops, while the goods trade holds off in expectation of a break sooner or later to more reasonable prices. It is predicted on the floor of the Cotton Exchange that 20-cent cotton would stimulate business quite generally.

Whether or not it will reach this basis depends somewhat on the attitude of mills who may decide to anticipate requirements in part at least, before it reaches that point. It was reported that on the break following the government announcement, mills had orders in the hands of brokers a little under the lowest prices reached on that day.

A local authority, in pointing out that the quantity of American cotton and linters consumed in the present cotton year will be above rather than below 12,000,000 bales, adds that a yield of around 11,600,000 bales may be regarded as the irreducible minimum for an American crop that the world's industry can get along with under existing conditions. Some advices received here from cloth manufacturing centers in New England, and from the local distributing market indicate that stocks held by both jobbers and retailers are becoming rapidly exhausted, and say that in the not distant future buying will probably be stimulated.

SPINNERS OPTIMISTIC

They also note that New England spinners, despite present dullness, are rather optimistic concerning the probable fall business. Commission houses stress the fact that in addition to mills generally having reduced stocks of cotton to a minimum, the south has recently become quite generally short of contracts in futures, while the major portion of the large July short interest has now been transferred to the new crop. Some of them declare their belief that the market at the level prevailing just after the government report was issued, was very near a good buying basis.

The American export movement continues on an amazingly large scale when the small stocks left in this country are considered, and is daily surprising the trade, especially the amount being consumed by Russia and Germany. The total for the season is now about a million bales in excess of last year. Business in southern spot markets however, continues rather light, partly because of the light supplies and the slow inquiry from mills. Unsold stocks of cotton in factor's hands at Memphis, at the end of last week amounted to 21,000 bales, compared with 19,500 in 1923; 29,000 in 1922 and 205,000 in 1921, according to figures compiled by Secretary Hotter, of the Memphis Cotton Exchange.

Politics May Sway Course Of Business In United States

Varying Influences Of Presidential Campaign And Easy Money Market

The political situation will exert its influence over the course of business for the next four months, according to the July reviews of the Mechanics and Metals National Bank and the Guaranty Trust Company of New York. But, according to the Mechanics and Metals review, there is a possibility that business men will welcome a change in the personnel of Congress on the ground that a new Congress would pass more favorable legislation than the last Congress. Cheap money rates, according to both reviews, are factors to be taken into consideration, and the abundance of credit now available provides an incentive toward expansion. High wage scales afford a retarding influence.

"Production in most lines has been adjusted to smallest demands," reports the bank, "and prices on the whole are more stable after an important measure of liquidation. Basic production is much below the peak of this year and last, and is at the lowest point since the Summer of 1922. This means that consumption in many lines, even at the present restricted point, must be outrunning output.

"Extreme movements bring their own correctives, and it is reasonable to believe that the rapid shrinkage in output in some materials has made supplies subnormal to such an extent that an upward turn in the output of those materials cannot be long delayed. But no boom is in sight. To give a thought to the favorable influences of the current situation they include these: Underlying trade conditions are sound; there is a large reserve buying power throughout the country; foreign conditions are improving; the available supply of banking credit is the most satisfactory in years. Though not all that had been hoped for tax reductions are an accomplished fact, and the country is partly relieved of one of its oppressive and unnecessary burdens. A rise has occurred in the price of wheat to the highest level in more than a year, and corn has advanced to its highest level since 1920.

The Guaranty Trust Company Review throws the following light on the situation resulting from the continued abundance of money:

"Various factors have operated in producing this situation, the most important being the continued flow of gold imports and the increase in banking reserves. The Spring and Summer reaction and in some lines positive depression, which have characterized general business and reduced the demand for loanable funds, have also influenced money rates. There has, in fact, been no such expansion of bank loans in the first half of this year as was witnessed in the corresponding period last year.

"Another important element in the situation is the fact that easy money and a good security market have made it possible for many concerns successfully to float bond and stock issues, thus relieving their banks. During the fiscal year just closing the Federal Government has also been able to reduce its interest-bearing debt nearly $1,000,000.

"A general impression seems to prevail that rates will continue low until the seasonal demands of the Fall and the final disposition of the political campaign give business a new impetus and expand the use of loanable funds.

MONEY MARKET IN VIENNA STARTLED AS BANK FAILS

Deposit Bank Had Engaged In Precious Speculative Deals

Vienna, June 29.—After having apparently calmed down the Vienna financial market last week became the victim of fresh disturbances on the final breakdown of the Deposit Bank. This institution was in a class standing next to the largest banks of Vienna. At the end of May, when its difficulties became known, the Deposit Bank was taken over by the five largest banking institutions of Vienna who were anxious to save the market from the serious shock which its suspension would have caused.

These banks, however, having now examined the real situation, have declared that the information given them in May regarding the bank's position was wholly inadequate. Credits, it now appears, had been granted to industrial concerns at preposterously high figures, especially to Polish coal mines in Silesia. Several outstanding law suits, apparently hopeless for the bank, threaten to call for payments by the bank which the institutions planning to assist it were unwilling to sacrifice from their own reserves.

The conclusion, therefore, was that the Deposit Bank would have to be abandoned to its fate. This announcement depressed the Boerse considerably, though not causing an actual collapse, the large banks having during the past few weeks prevented any such catastrophe through purchase of shares which were offered on the market. The feeling in financial circles is that the fate of the Deposit Bank was not undeserved. During the last few years the institution has departed from conservative management, taken to speculation, and passed from one owner to another, among them being the post-war profiteer Castillione, who, after acquiring enormous profits by sales of some institutions, purchased others.

The Deposit Bank, however, was never regarded as a typical banking institution; it was, in fact, the only important bank which had recourse to wild speculation after the reconstruction period. All other banks and private industrial concerns, which have adhered to conservative methods, stand unshaken in credits, though some of them have found difficulty in maintaining their position.

American Money Is Shifting To London; Inquiry Made

New York, July 12.—British bankers are withdrawing a substantial part of their deposits from New York, it was indicated yesterday, when inquiry was made into the causes for the recent advance of the pound sterling. The pound has moved up 4 cents since July 1, or from $4.32 to and around $4.36. New York institutions also are sending money to London, and, it was explained, the advance of the pound has been a natural consequence.

The movement was linked with the recent reduction in interest rates in New York City, and started upon after the latest reduction in the rediscount rate of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York to 3½ percent. Bankers have been finding it difficult to place money in the New York market and have shifted part of their balances to the London market, in which rates are 1 percent or a fraction greater than in the New York market.

This transfer has been effected through the purchase in New York of sterling and the sale in London of dollars. Actual cost of making the transfer has been virtually nothing, a cablegram between New York and London institutions establishing the new credits wherever desired.

Illustrating the attractiveness of the London market was a reduction in call loan money rates here in the outside market. The Stock Exchange market continued steady at 2 percent, but the supply of funds overflowed that market and went into the outside, where the rate was quoted at 1¾ percent. In London, rates are around 3½ percent against prevailing rates of around 2 to 2½ percent in New York.

The upward movement in sterling, which came as a surprise considering the season of the year, was said to be a source of gratitude to British bankers, who have been perplexed over its failure to advance until recently. The attraction of money to London was said to be correcting an abnormal condition in the New York market, and the shift of funds has been welcomed on both sides of the Atlantic. London bankers have discussed the advisability of raising the official bank rate of England in order to encourage the movement, according to news dispatches received here, but New York bankers said that this would not be done.

The pound sterling will soon enter its period of dollar-accumulation incident to purchases of American crop commodities for English consumption. The buying usually starts in September and a month or two later reaches its height. No effort will be made to raise the pound sterling to par, it was believed, in view of this work ahead of the English currency.

Principal benefits accruing to London from the lowering of New York money rates below those of London have been seen in the withdrawal of British capital to London from the New York market, the attracting of foreign balances and the stimulation of speculation on the long side of sterling.

Germany And The World

MANY of our German readers appear to have misconstrued the sense of our editorial article in yesterday's issue in which we had occasion to deprecate a statement by President Ebert which we believed might militate against an early settlement of the reparations question and thus retard the world's, and Germany's own, prosperity, although we can quite understand President Ebert's sentiments under the emotional stress of the occasion which must have recalled the sacrifices of the Fatherland. It is needless for us to state that we have no desire whatever to keep alive international animosities which can serve no useful purpose. Nor is it our desire or intention to spin a disquisition on the causes of the War since there were so many complex factors involved in the 1914 crisis. Viewing the progress of the world from a lofty altitude, the Germany of the past had her great men who enriched the sum of her world's culture and civilisation, and Germany herself prospered prodigiously by reason of them. When we think of Beethoven, Schumann, Mendelssohn, Wagner, and Schubert, who have given to the world beautiful compositions of harmony that will remain imperishable; of Goethe, Schiller, Heine, Kant, Schopenhauer and Feuerbach, who have added to the sum of the world's store of philosophy, literature and poetry; of Ostwald, Weissman and Ehrlich, by whose genius the world's fund of science has become the richer; of Hauptmann, Wedekind and Sudermann, who in their own way have served humanity as well as their own Fatherland; when we think of those other intellectual giants whose names are reverenced not alone by Germans, there is little question that a nation that could have produced such sons as she did in the past will, without doubt, continue to contribute to her own and the world's greatness.

In the present structure of human relations, the peoples of the world are vitally interdependent, and Germany being one of its great members, no real world progress is possible until the European family of nations is once again at concord. The present difficulties that agitate Europe are, after all, only a striving for the attainment of a common goal—world prosperity—the advent of which is only a matter of time, but it is for the world's statesmen to foresee and thus happily to prevent such difficulties as must arise before its final consummation. We in China are particularly anxious to discern signs of a state of better mutual understanding among the peoples of Europe inasmuch as international prosperity in this region of the world hinges on a working arrangement in Europe satisfactory to all parties. Surely it cannot be doubted that the Germans in all parts of China will share in the hoped for prosperity, in the building up of which German energy and commercial acumen are needed equally with those of other nations.

The Predicament Of The Chinese Provincial Students In America

THE Chinese Government sends to the United States two classes of students—those from Tsing Hua College in Peking who are supported directly by the portion of the American share of the Boxer Indemnity which was remitted in 1908, and, in addition to these students, who usually number from fifty to a hundred, the various provincial governments of China also send students to America. In addition to these two classes of Government-supported students, a considerable number of privately supported students also go to the United States. The private students are supported by their parents, by business houses and by organisations such as the various missionary bodies and colleges.

The movement of the various provinces in sending students to America separate from those sent by the Central Government through Tsing Hua College, is, we suppose, one manifestation of the "provincial independence" movement in China. It is this class of students with which we are especially interested because of the fact that they have been having considerable difficulties with their support in recent years.

In a recent list of overdue obligations of the Peking Government listed in one of the newspapers there appeared a considerable sum of money which had been borrowed from a bank in Washington, D. C. There was considerable mystery regarding this loan, since nothing had ever been heard in Peking of a loan to China by this bank and no representative of the bank had ever been in China so far as anyone knew. Finally it developed that this loan had been negotiated by a Chinese bureau in Washington, D. C., which carried the name of "Bureau of Education for Chinese Provincial Students," and that the Chinese Minister in Washington had been forced to go personal security for the repayment of the loan.

This loan and others along similar lines, upon being investigated, revealed a most disgraceful situation. There are, according to report, between 1,800 and 2,000 Chinese students in the United States, of which number some 400 belong to Tsing Hua College and receive their support regularly from the portion of the Boxer Indemnity remitted by the United States in 1908. Then, in addition to the 400 from Tsing Hua, there are a considerable number of private students who are supported by their parents, by business houses and banks and organisations such as mission bodies and so on. And then, still further in addition, there are a considerable number of students who have been sent to the United States by the various provinces. Honan Province, for example, a couple of years ago had 40 students in American colleges and universities and so on.

Now the difficulties have been this: After sending these young men to America to obtain higher educations, many of the provinces have promptly forgotten about them and cut off their means of support. The real reason for this sorry state of affairs has been due, we imagine, to the shifting political affairs of the provinces. One Tuchun would send a bunch of students to America and then he would be kicked out of office and his successor, knowing or caring little for the obligations of his predecessor, would neglect to remit further funds. The result has been that many of these students have been left in an unenviable position in the United States and have had to shift for themselves or depend upon American charity. Finally, to relieve the situation, the so-called "Director" of Chinese provincial students in Washington negotiated a loan from a Washington bank—and now this loan also is in default, and there you are.

Admiral Tsai Ting-kan of Peking, himself one of the earliest of Chinese students to go to school in America, recently has interested himself in this question of the plight of the Chinese provincial students in the United States and is advocating that a portion of the final balance of the Boxer Indemnity which is being remitted to China, should be set aside for financing these provincial students and especially in wiping out the obligations which have been incurred to banks in Washington, D. C., for this purpose. Admiral Tsai also recommends that something be done to clean up this whole subject of the provinces sending students to the United States independently of the Central Government. The American colleges and Universities are, of course, glad to welcome and enrol as many students as China may desire to send to America for higher educations, but it has been found that many of these provincial students are immature for college work and after dropping out of school are forced to shift for themselves as best they can in a strange land. Most of the Chinese restaurants or "chop-suey," cafes in the various American cities are staffed by these students who went to America for an education but because of insufficient preparation at home before going to America or due to withdrawal of financial support from home ended up as waiters in the restaurants. This, doubtless, provides a certain form of American education but not exactly the kind the students expected to get when they left home.

GOOD ROADS FOR CHINA

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Those who are making a clamor against the use of the Boxer Indemnity Fund, to be returned to China by the Powers, for building roads in China ought to read carefully your editorial of last Sunday on General Wu Pei-fu's plan to use soldier labor to build a wagon and motor road from Kaifeng, the capital of Honan province, to Chengtu, the capital of Szechuen province. Your argument that "Although General Wu is undoubtedly thinking of this new road in terms of military strategy as a means of maintaining his control of China's great western province, it will, if constructed, nevertheless be of great economic value to China" is very convincing and ought to bring the opponents of the road-construction scheme back to their senses, if they have any sense at all. The building of good roads throughout China means the improvement of communications facilities in the country, which, in turn, will be a great stimulus to the development of agricultural, industrial and commercial enterprises, thus creating more wealth to the nation and more means of livelihood for the poor people, many of whom are at present being forced to become soldiers and bandits in order to save themselves from starvation. With the surplus income created in this way, the Government can open good schools, establish public libraries, encourage science research work, and do many other things beneficial to the people as a whole. After all, it is the end—the result that may be obtained—that counts; so why should we be so particular about the "intention" of one's acts?

Even granted that, in advocating the building of roads in China, General Wu has his military plans in mind, would it not be a good thing for him, or any other person, to make use of the roads, built with soldier labor or with the Boxer Indemnity Fund, and clear the country of all bandits and wrong-doers and effect the unification of China? Unless one wants to see China to continue to be in the present state of chaos and lawlessness, he cannot conscientiously oppose the road-construction plan merely on the ground that one of those advocating it is thinking of the roads so built in terms of military strategy as a means of maintaining his control of a certain area.

Speaking frankly, those who are opposing the proposition of using the Boxer Indemnity Fund for the construction of roads in China are themselves not without selfish motives. It is a too well known fact that in almost all of the Government schools the teachers' pay has been in arrears for several months. The Government is too poor to pay and the teachers see in it only a hopeless game. Now that there is big fortune in sight, why not make a scramble for it? One editor of a newspaper once remarked to me that if someone would undertake to pay the so-called teachers and educators their salary in arrear and guarantee their regular pay for so many months to come, they will immediately cease to make any noise. This statement, humorous as it is, was made without the least intent of malice, and, in my opinion, is not altogether unfounded.

It is feared in some quarters, especially among the educational circles, that should the Indemnity Fund be used to build roads, the revenue eventually derived from the operation of such roads would be seized by the militarists and would not be used for purposes beneficial to the people. To this objection raised by the educators, we may raise a counter-objection: Should the Indemnity Fund be used for educational purposes, who is to guarantee that the money will not be seized by the militarists or squandered in some other way? They might say that the Chinese people and the Powers which undertake to return the Indemnity Fund will see that the money is used for such purposes as intended; but, then, why cannot the people and the Powers see that the income derived from the roads is spent properly and legitimately? It may not be a bad thing for the educators and the people in general to ask the advocates of the road-construction scheme to announce in public their intention to use such revenue for the promotion of educational and cultural work—which, I am sure, they will be glad to do if they are sincere in their purpose—and for the people to devise some means by which such an announcement can be made binding upon those making it; but it is altogether too much to condemn the road-building proposition merely for the imaginery fear that the higher-ups may squeeze the revenue to be derived from the operation of the roads built with Boxer Indemnity Fund.

Thanking you, dear Editor, for the space,

I am, etc.,

KINGDOM COME

What do we want? What precisely do we mean by the Millennium, or the Golden Age, or Utopia? What sort of "Kingdom Come" is it we pray for?

Sit down some time and think it over; try to get rid of the vagueness of the idea, and to determine exactly what conditions would satisfy you and all of us. The effort may not be without good results upon your present notions.

Just as a suggestion let me give one statement of the kind of Millennium that appeals to me.

It is that state of society and that perfection of government in which there shall be secured for every human being Intellectual Liberty, Equality of Opportunity, Justice in all Human Relations, and free Spiritual Fraternity.

This is somewhat like the French motto, Liberty, Equality, Fraternity, only the terms are defined a bit, and Justice is added.

First, Intellectual Liberty. The last element of coercion, direct or indirect, must be removed from the processes of the mind. The Ethics of the Intellect must be acknowledged. The mind must work absolutely unbribed by expediency, the opinions of others, fear, or authority. There can be no perfect unity of love and service that does not rest on perfect freedom of thought.

There must be entire Equality of Opportunity. The state ought to see to it that every baby coming into the world has an equal start with every other baby. All inheritance of wealth that interferes with this should be abated. Every child should receive adequate training for the world's work. There will never be equality of intelligence, of physical force, of genius, nor of any other kind of ability; inequality in these respects adds zest to life. And the advantages of personal ability do not cause injustice; it is custom-buttressed and law-entrenched privilege, unearned and undeserved yet perpetuated, that oppresses the world.

Justice is essential. When that comes, there shall be no more benevolence and charity as we now practise them. The great hunger of mankind is not for kindness and mercy and pity—it is for justice. When we have justice we shall have peace, as it is written: "Righteousness and peace kiss each other."

Lastly, we shall have free Spiritual Fraternity. The problem of the race is one of fraternising. We now get together in sects and nations. Religiously and politically we as yet feel but faintly the universal breeze. We do not realise humanity. The human nerve is feeble. Some day the idea of universal brotherhood shall burn in the race with a heat and shine far stronger than the present sectarian, partisan, and patriotic enthusiasms.

I do not think human nature will have to be transformed to get these things. It is a question of vision. We need to see. When once we understand what we want we will organise and get it.

Discontent

Those who are in authority do not like discontent.

Those who are out of authority yet seek it, do like discontent.

In the coming election, therefore, there will be an effort on the part of the Outs to create dissatisfaction and an effort on the part of the Ins to allay dissatisfaction.

The efforts of both parties will be discounted by this fact.

It is to the interest of the Republican Administration to show that, on the whole, their care for the affairs of government has been effective during the past four years.

It is to the interest of the Democratic party to show that the care of the Republicans has been ineffective.

We may look everywhere for discontent that shall be created by the Democrats. We shall look everywhere for a feeling of reassurance created by the Republicans.

This is politics. It is the way we run our Government.

In every country where there is democracy there is an effort to create discontent with the constituted authorities.

This has recently occurred in France, in England and in Japan which are more or less democratic countries. The opposition has succeeded in creating sufficient discontent to unseat the holding party leaders and to seat others.

Immediately the process will be reversed. Those who have got in will try to show that they are doing the best they can, and those who are out will try to show that the Ins are a set of grand rascals.

Fortunately the whole matter is up to the common sense of the general public. This public can be stampeded just about so far and no farther.

This public, if you give it time enough, settles upon the truth, although sometimes it demands an opportunity to commit foolishness simply because it does not wish to be bossed.

The herding of the public and the giving direction to public opinion is a difficult and complicated business.

Party bosses are those who usually succeed in this and demonstrate themselves as being capable. They have what is perhaps the strongest competition in the world. Usually the best man, in the sense of the fittest man, wins.

More Truth Than Poetry

BY S. E. KISER

I start out in the morning feeling
Quite right in muscle and in mind;
All Nature seems to be revealing
An inclination to be kind;
My step is quick, my fancy airy,
The way ahead looks very bright,
I glance at every Jane and Mary
With keen delight.

But I shall not be long permitted
To think that all the world is fair;
My happiness will soon have flitted,
And I'll see dangers everywhere,
A shiver will go shooting through me
As, presently, by chance, I read
How pyorrhea will undo me,
Unless I heed.

The car cards always lure my glances,
And they remind me of my fate:
Mine seems the slenderest of chances,
I'm told I'll suffer soon or late!
I try to cling to hope, but never
Can drive the haunting dread away;
My teeth will soon be gone forever,
Or they'll decay.

I start out blithely in the morning,
Perhaps with some nice, new idea,
And then I get the dreadful warning
That I'm in line for pyorrhea:
There's no escape; with sure and steady
Approaches brown dejection comes—
I seem to feel the germs already
Deep in my gums.

The Measure Of Power

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS

"I have read that 'About twice as much power is required to stop an express train as to start one.' Would you endorse that statement? It strikes me as being very inaccurate.—L. C. I."

* * *

The statement is incomplete and therefore misleading. It ignores the essential element of time. Power in mechanics means the rate at which work is done, and work means the overcoming of resistance through a certain distance. If a body is moved work is done, the distance moved multiplied by the force employed being the measure of the work. To find the power we must divide the work by the time. Of course a force that arrests the motion of a body does work as well as when it sets the body moving, and here again the power concerned is measured by the work done divided by the time taken.

The unit of work is called a foot-pound. This means the amount of work required to overcome a weight, or a pressure, of one pound through a distance of one foot. Nothing is said about the time taken, for that is not an element in the definition of work. If the one-pound body is moved a distance of one foot, in a second, or in a year, or in a million years, the work done is the same.

But, when the question is how much power is employed, time becomes an indispensable element in the calculation, for, as already said, power is the rate at which work is done. It takes an enormously greater power to move a pound weight one foot in a second than to move in the same distance in an hour, or a day. This fact is often ignored, with confusing results. Thus, many persons appear to think that a "horse-power" is measured simply by the work it does, or the effect it produces, without regard to the time consumed. But this is not so. A horse-power depends strictly upon time. Thus there are two commonly used definitions of horse-power which, though widely different in appearance, are identical in reality. According to one definition a horse-power is equivalent to 33,000 foot-pounds, and according to the other it is equivalent to only 550 foot-pounds. But, mark that the 33,000 foot-pounds are spread over a whole minute, while the 550 foot-pounds are expanded in a single second. So, in speaking of horse-power the time must always be expressed, or clearly understood. (Observe that 550 multiplied by 60, the number of seconds in a minute, gives 33,000.) Proportioning the work to the time makes the two definitions of horse-power equivalent to one another. But crowd the 33,000 units of work in to the shorter times, and the power must be correspondingly increased. A 200-pound man climbing vertically five feet per second would develop nearly two horse-power, but at one foot per second less than half a horse-power.

Now we see why the statement that it requires more power to stop an express train than to set it going is misleading. It does not require more power unless the motion is destroyed in a shorter time than was consumed in producing it.

You work your automobile up to a speed of forty miles an hour and feel no discomfort from the gradually increasing speed; but put on all the brakes at once and the machine may turn a somersault. The arresting force is compelled to do in a second as much work as the driving force did in perhaps several minutes while bringing the speed up to its maximum.

It is useful knowledge for everybody to know the four "fundamental conceptions" of mechanics, viz: Matter, Force, Time and Space. Matter and force are measured in pounds; time in seconds, and space in feet. Work that is stored up is called energy, and is also measured in foot-pounds when it is in action. It is sometimes called "capacity to do work." Potential energy is illustrated by a weight held in suspension; kinetic energy by the same weight falling.

Once Overs

BY J. J. MUNDY

If you should lose your job tomorrow, and then be forced to live on your savings for one month perhaps, would your financial condition be able to stand such a predicament?

Your job may be safe but other conditions might make an unusual call on your income. In case of illness have you anything ahead to meet the emergency?

Are you not depending too much on everything running along smoothly?

Is it not true that you do not worry much about the future because you feel that things are likely to run along indefinitely as they are?

Sometimes when you think the matter over you decide to start a savings account and let it stay as a savings account, but soon it is hard to put away that stipulated sum each week and you lapse and finally stop trying.

Or you need a little extra money and in a twinkling your savings are gone.

Then you decide to put away a little more than the sum you had first intended, so that the final average may be what you had planned.

But not unless your taste and your habits change will this make any difference in the sum total of your bank account.

It is time to be alarmed over your lack of business shrewdness.

DRESS

By Mary Marshall

Black and White Plaid is Used to Make Many Smart New Bathing Suits.

"Woman always looks a fright in a bathing suit anyway, so what's the use of spending time and money trying to look just a degree or so less frightful? If you like surf bathing and feel benefited thereby just put on any bathing suit that comes within the law and keep under the water as much as possible."

That would be the advice of some women regarding this problem of bathing suits. There are many women who are so indifferent regarding them that they don't even bother to possess their own suits. When they go to some resort where there is sea or lake bathing they trust that there will be some sort of bathing suit around the house—a discarded bathing suit of their hostess or a suit left by some guest—that will answer the purpose, or they may hope to be able to buy some makeshift of a bathing suit at one of the little shops along the ocean or lake front.

Other women plan a new bathing suit—possibly more—every season, with just as much consideration as they would plan a reception gown or a street suit. If they buy it ready made they have fittings and arrange for necessary alterations. There are clothes shops that make a specialty of making smart and exclusive bathing suits.

It is always interesting to see just how the bathing suit of the year is affected by the fashion in other clothes that prevails that year. In general the length of the bathing skirt fluctuates with the skirt length of other skirts. When ther skirts trail the bathing suit skirt comes almost midway bewteen kness and ankles. When the skirt is short then the bathing suit comes well above the knees.

Just at present most of the bathing suits have bloomers, rather scant and fitting well below the knee. One model even has bloomers that extend to the ankles, with gaiter-like legs that button at the sides.

The sketch shows a wraparound model of black and white plaid silk, with plain black silk bloomers. For the woman who likes to have an all-wool bathing garment next her skin this allblack part of the suit might be of wool instead of silk. This alone might be worn for tank swimming—as the silk part is very easily put on and fastened at the side.

ON THE SCREEN OF FASHION

Mushroom pleating is the name applied to a style of very fine, very close pleating that distinctly suggests the underside of a mushroom. Separate skirts of very fine silk crepe are pleated in this manner and it is used frequently in making crepe de chine negligees.

Wrap-around bathing suit in black and white plaid silk over black bloomers.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

"TEA" IN SUMMER

There are some women who can drink tea with enjoyment every afternoon in the whole year—women who find hot tea as bracing on a scorching mid-summer afternoon as they do in December or January, and very much more acceptable than an iced lemonade. But the majority of Americans hold the belief, doubtless based on accurate observations of their own reactions, that hot tea is a most inappropriate afternoon beverage any time between mid-May and sometime in October.

Well, if you don't serve tea in the afternoon in warm weather, how should you serve your cooling beverage? If you have guests at "tea" time should you offer them a cooling drink as an alternative for tea? Should it be brought to them on a tea wagon, or should they be brought to it—served in a punch bowl in some cool retreat?

It is a fact that much of the ceremony of tea drinking is lost when you drink some sort of sweet-sour iced drink at "tea" time. And when you assemble friends around a table to dispense such a beverage with cakes or wafers it seems like playing Hamlet with the Hamlet left out or making an omelet without the eggs. So don't attempt to make much of a ceremony of it. A maid may bring glasses of some cooling drink all poured out on little plates and pass them to you, or you may have a punch bowl filled with it placed in an end of the living room or on the veranda and then guests may help themselves or each other to the beverage as they wish it.

Women Students At Oxford Make Demand For Freedom

England under a Labor government is growing used to strikes. But news of a strike of women at Oxford, England's oldest university, against the moral standards of 1875, with their restrictions against the intermingling of the sexes, is something new. It is a war of brains and not of brawn. Oxford has long prided herself upon being the "Home for Lost Causes," but she is now facing a crisis that calls for more delicate handling. Judging the post-war world of youth with craze for jazz and night clubs, for social freedom and frankness, and its violent reaction against the cramping restrictions and snobbishness of Victorian England, it looks as if Oxford will lose another of her famous causes.

Rules are made to be broken on this side of the Atlantic. The victory of the coeducational college has made this country an example for Europe. American campuses reflect American life, where men and women meet each other as social equals and friendly rivals for academic honors later, after graduation, becoming rivals in the professional and business world. But coeducational education has made slow progress in the British Isles. Only north of the Tweed has the principle found hearty support. The Scottish universities give women students equal academic and social privileges with men; so do those of Wales and Ireland. The only truly English university that may be recognized as an American counterpart, in its recognition of the equality of the sexes is that of London.

The two ancient universities of Oxford and Cambridge, however, are the twin peaks of the British academic Olympus. In the early '08s the women first threw down the gage of battle. Petitions were circulated and the finest intellect of Britain was found ranged on both sides. In 1889 Gladstone said: "My rule is strict against submitting memorials to be presented to our authorities. But having had a daughter for some years at Newnham, my sympathies run strongly in your direction. The absolute restriction of university and college endowments to men is, under present circumstances impolitic and unjust." This was written soon after the establishment at Oxford of Lady Margaret Hall, at Cambridge of Newnham and Girton Colleges. Oxford professors lectured to the students, but they were not granted Oxford degrees, although they passed the same examinations as the men.

Since then Oxford has, besides Lady Margaret, St. Hugh's, Hilda's and the Society of Home Students, where women of non-collegiate standing are taught. Cambridge was rocked to its foundations when, soon after the women began taking the same examinations as the men, a woman student was ranked with the senior wrangler in the famous mathematical tripos, since abolished. But in those pre-war days women were content to keep their feminine atmosphere, to be satisfied in proving to the men that, so far as brains went, they were equals at Oxford and Cambridge.

SOCIAL BATTLE BEGUN

In Victorian England Tennyson, the poet laureate, was the public censor of sentiment. In "The Princes" he justified higher education for women, but isolated from men, and he let his poetic fancy fly into the future when there would be a grand period of academic "twosing" with "Prudes for Proctors, Dowagers for Deans, and sweet girl graduates with golden hair."

But the granting of political suffrage, the large share that women took in the economic organisation that attended the World War, has swept away the Tennysonian sentimentalities. Suffrage and coeducation at the famous seats of learning have become accepted facts. And now the social battle is on. Women are not content with being kept in academic seclusion; they want to meet their fellow students as social equals, unfettered by chaperons and restrictions. Cambridge has always preened herself upon being more advanced and up-to-date than her elder sister Oxford. But, despite the ladies' battle that is now being waged on the Isis, it was Oxford that first granted academic degrees to women; while Cambridge today continues the only British university that withholds them.

Curious points in the present situation are these: Today Oxford grants degrees to women, but the students hold themselves studiously aloof outside the lecture halls. At Cambridge, however, though the women are admitted to lectures, they are not granted degrees. But the Cambridge undergraduate freely mixes with his sister students. They tea and dance and canoe together, a situation that has doubtless prompted the revolt of the women students at Oxford.

The protest of the Oxford women is based upon such restrictions as the approval of the lady college principal before a woman student may join a club open to men and women graduates. If literary societies meet in an Oxford college, its women members must first obtain permission of the Dean to attend, and then be accompanied by a lady of the Faculty. Mixed theatre parties are not allowed except in reserved seats, and mixed parties may not come together for social times in tea rooms and cafes at Oxford before 2 o'clock in the afternoon or after 5:30. Nor may a woman undergraduate go walking, bicyling, motoring or on the river in punt or canoe with any man other than her brother unless permission is obtained from her Principal, and then at least two women undergraduates from the same college must be in the party.

WHAT CAMBRIDGE DID

The situation that has arisen, and the differences obtaining at Oxford and Cambridge, were recently celebrated by an undergraduate poet, who recalls the fact that until the close of the last century by the charters of both Oxford and Cambridge the Dons or professors were obliged to remain celibates:

Said the Isis to the Cam:
"I don't care a tinker's dam!
I have lost full many a Cause!
Might as well amend my Laws!"

Said the Cam to the Isis:
"Don't desert me in this crisis!
It's as modern as the Vote,
Must I wear both beam and mote?"

Said the Isis to the Cam:
"Lo, our Dons now wheel the Pram!
I shall lecture them, but nay—
Never with them shall I play!"

Said the Cam to the Isis:
"That's a tip! Say what your price is!
For I'll play with them, but never Shall I gown and hood the Clever!"

Thus it happens that while Oxford grants decrees to women they are isolated from its undergraduate life. In examinations and lectures the women sit apart. Men undergraduates may attend a public dance in Oxford, but women students may not attend it. At the many popular public tea rooms in Oxford, like the Cadena, Buol's or Du Jon's women undergraduates celebrate the famous British institution of afternoon tea in lonely groups, where no Oxford undergraduate is ever seen. Occasionally a professor's wife gives a dance or a tea to which a few women undergraduates are asked to meet the students. In Summer there are sometimes mixed parties on the river, in canoes or punts. On the pretty, winding Cherwell they are rarely seen in mixed parties, and then it is to be noticed that the men undergraduates loll among the cushions while the women wield the paddle or the punt pole. Folly Bridge on the Cherwell is certainly an architectural and not a social designation.

It is only during the commemoration week, the Oxford equivalent for the American commencement, that the historic town and colleges are truly open to petticoat rule. Then their "sisters and their cousins and their aunts," to say nothing of anxious and watchful mothers, take tea in undergraduate rooms, throng the punts and canoes on the Cher, and lend a gay touch of color to the ancient monastic cloisters and quadrangles, where, until late in Victoria's reign, the Oxford Dons obeyed the ancient monastic rule of celibacy. Since the ancient laws of celibacy were rescinded at Oxford and Cambridge the Dons who marry are obliged to live in the town and surrender their rooms in the quadrangle. And, needless to say, they do not wear their official gowns when they wheel the family perambulator upon the classic High Street of Oxford.

BREAK TRADITIONS

The coming of the American Rhodes scholars brought about the first social revolution. Only under extreme parental pressure does an Oxford undergraduate pay a formal call upon a young lady friend of his family who happens to be domiciled in Oxford. But the Rhodes scholars, with the social habits engendered by the American tradition for coeducation in school and college, were not loath to follow up any chance acquaintance or introduction obtained either under academic or town chaperonage. The early Rhodes scholars blazed the social trail. There is the story of the Rhodes scholar who called for the third time upon an English girl he had met at some semi-official function. When he was leaving the house, so the story runs, he was met by her father, who solemnly asked if it were not time for the American visitor to declare his intentions regarding his daughter.

At London the women students enjoy the same status as that obtaining at Cornell or Wisconsin. The same is true of the Scottish and Welsh universities and colleges. Oxford, the home of lost causes, is even deserted by her ancient sister, Cambridge. She may remark that she grants academic privileges to women, whereas Cambridge, for all her classic boast of progress and science still withholds them. But Cambridge answers that she plays with them, takes tea, jazzes, goes on the river, debates, discusses literature and politics in mixed clubs, and meets her sister undergraduates without the Victorian restrictions that still prevail at Oxford. It remains to be seen how long Cambridge will continue to withhold her academic degrees from women. She will soon face a feminine academic revolt.

Meanwhile Oxford remains socially adamant. In the famous O. U. D. S., the Oxford University Dramatic Society where such actors as Bourcher, Irving Jr., Sir Frank Benson and many promising English Thespians of the modern stage made their first appearance as undergraduates, the parts for women are always taken by well-known actresses from London. Among these was Ellen Terry. The Oxford women undergraduates rightly claim that their amateur cooperation would be more in keeping with such an undergraduate dramatic club. But so far they are not invited. It remains to be seen also whether the leading actresses of the London stage, who regard as a great honor the invitation to take a part in Oxford undergraduate representations of classic English drama, will lightly relinquish what has come to be regarded as a sort of professional perquisite.

None the less there are periodic male undergraduate outbursts at both Oxford and Cambridge against the increasing presence of women students. It is customary in these twin medieval institutions to utilise the bicycle in reaching the various colleges where lectures or examinations are given. Not infrequently the ladies emerge from the halls where they have been imbibing knowledge equally with the men to find their bicycles chained and padlocked, so that the services of a blacksmith are required. And many other pranks are played upon the women students, but never revealed to their college authorities.

With the encouraging example of Cambridge and the hearty cooperation of the American Rhodes bloc, Oxford will doubtless yield to the demands of its women students for greater social freedom. Youth will win the day.

New Attack Against Yang Sen Rumored

(Independent News Service)

Hankow, August 1.—Rumors are still afloat here and also in various ports of Szechuen that General Hsiung Keh-wu and his defeated colleagues are making plans to attack the present government of Szechuen headed by General Yang Sen. Hsiung is reported to have solicited the assistance of the Yunnanese, and also lined under him all the disgruntled elements of Szechuen in order to assail Yang Sen and his group.

General Yang Sen is remaining in Chengtu where he is functioning as the Tuli or Director-General of Affairs of Szechuen. There is very little prospect of his leaving Chengtu in the near future. Chungking is occupied by General Teng Shih-hou acting as Civil Governor. It is thought that while Yang Sen's group is in all respects stronger than his enemy faction, there is an apparent lack of centralisation of power in the present administration.
